Tension continues after the announcement of the election results with a record of 41 deaths and hundreds of injuries

- These are the figures reported as of 11:00 PM on December 24th. Considering the magnitude of the situation, the actual numbers may exceed those presented

The tension that followed the proclamation of the electoral results by the Constitutional Council (CC) continues in Mozambique with clashes between the Police of the Republic of Mozambique (PRM) and protesters.

The Center for Democracy and Human Rights (CDD) counted 41 fatalities, ten in Nampula, nine in Maputo, 14 in Sofala, one in Niassa, four in Cabo Delgado, and three in Mocuba, Zambézia. The fatal victims included civilians and police officers. And an Army officer who was shot by a bullet fired by a UIR agent.

There are hundreds of injuries reported, both serious and minor. The Maputo Central Hospital (HCM) alone received 40 people injured in the context of the protests. These are the figures reported as of 11:00 PM on December 24th. Considering the magnitude of the situation, the actual numbers may exceed those presented. Since December 23, the police have been shooting in neighborhoods and throwing tear gas grenades in a manhunt operation.

Destruction of public and private assets and looting

The country also continues to record situations of destruction of public and private assets, and looting of stores, factories, and warehouses. Mozambique is experiencing the worst moment of its existence. The country is completely at a standstill. The skies are covered in black smoke from burning tires and public and private infrastructure. The floor is covered in blood. The State is absent.
